A Day in the Life: A Student's Perspective

As you enter 588 Sixth Street, Park Slope, our assistant principal greets you. At your locker, you chat with friends while organizing for morning classes. If it is your birthday, your locker will be decorated in your favorite colors.

Before homeroom, students will be working in our Greenhouse Classroom on a science research project. Down in the Art Room students work on projects class- and club-related. On the third floor, the Gospel Choir or instrumental ensemble might be practicing for a liturgy or concert. In guidance, seniors are sharing college acceptances and scholarship awards. All this activity and the day hasn't even officially begun.

And what a day it will be! In English classes, you explore the nuances of poetry; with math and science classes that teach you about the universe as manifest in the laws of physics; with history classes that will open a door to the past as a way to understand the present; religion classes discovering Faith in the Media or with foreign language classes where you discover your love of language.

In between, there will, of course, be breaks: for lunch, where you can share stories and jokes over a plate of Marco's delicious cheese fries; for P.E., where you can blow off steam in an intense game of volleyball; for study halls, where you can return to the greenhouse room or library to complete an article for the newspaper or research Ireland and Australia – the next international destinations.

Fearless Girls, Future Leaders

Fontbonne Hall Academy students participating in the Common Cents Program's financial workshop visited Wall Street and attended a luncheon with a senior portfolio manager from a multi-billion dollar hedge fund.

Young women from the Bay Ridge school visited several Financial District landmarks including the Charging Bull and Fearless Girl statues, the gravesite of Alexander Hamilton, the NYSE and the steps of Federal Hall where George Washington was sworn in as the nation's first president. Then they traveled to Midtown to join Jane Castle for lunch to discuss her role as a distressed debt portfolio manager.

The students are thankful for the valuable education and career advice they received from the Yale and Stanford Business School graduate.

In other news, entrepreneur and business students interviewed Thomas Cucco, founder and owner of Table 87 Coal Oven Pizza. Cucco discussed his pitch on Shark Tank, how he has built his restaurant business and how he developed his frozen line of packaged coal oven pizza.

Table 87 is the first in Brooklyn to offer coal oven pizza by the slice! He inspired the girls by attributing determination and perseverance to his success.
